THE ZIONIST CRISIS

A Jewish Congress needed in Canada

The rebuff administered by the MacDonald government in regard the Palestine situation was aimed not at the Zionists but at the Jewish ple as a whole. There are but a handful of Zionists among a Jewish ulation of some fifteen millions dispersed throughout the world. The lfour Declaration and the ratification of the British mandate con- plated the whole of Jewdom as the recipient of the advantages implied them. Of course, the term "people" is an abstract word. It relates to a up of individuals who have certain characteristics that cause them to be ded together as one class. Many of the members, perhaps most of m, may not be conscious of their relationship to the whole. The gmata which determine adherence may play but a minor part in the nomy of their interests and fail to make themselves felt in their world thought and action. The Jewish people, owing to their scattered posi- and their assimilation to the modi of their environments, have of years become less and less affected by the unifying factors in their class . Religion is the most obvious force that makes for Jewish cohesion. t in proportion as religion generally is being crowded out of the broad ne of life into a secluded corner, it becomes ever vaguer as an in- ence in Jewish consciousness. Thus it is that while the leaders of na- al affairs among the powers, being accustomed to thinking and acting terms of the national character of the Jewish people, the Jews themselves the most part failed to realize the nationalist implications of their con- ued existence. The nations of the world treated the Jews as a nation. d therefore the arrangements regarding Palestine perforce involved granting to it of a status of a Jewish state. It did not need a Balfour, d a League of Nations, in a moment of exalted nationalist self-conscious- ss, to grant to the Jewish people merely a batch of visas to allow sets individuals to immigrate into Palestine. The circumstances surround- the situation implied the conception of Palestine as a national home- d for the Jews who compose a nation. It follows therefore that whether e bulk of the Jews are aware of the significance of Palestine as a symbol their national character, or not, the recent action of the MacDonald vernment is a blow at the Jewish people as a whole. When you strike ris you make every Frenchman see red. When MacDonald degraded s level in Palestine he degraded the level of every Jew.

What are the Jews to do now to cope with the crisis?

One thing is certain: We cannot accept the advice of our neo Ahad a'amists who would have us forego our political and national aspirations d turn Palestine into a sort of cannery to preserve Jewish culture in tins th the poisonous exhalations from a putrid theology. Our people in Pales- e are a vigorous, vital lot. They came to Palestine to build a home- nd, to create a new life. They would not stand for conditions of subjec- on to Arab dominance. To force them to live as an abject minority nder Effendi rule would be eggregiously to break faith with them. Moreover, these new pioneers did not come to Palestine to kiss the holy round and drench it with tears of longing and yearning and impotent ve. They came to break it and furrow it and make it fertile for new

THE SAGA OF A SOUL

A Review by Rabbi Maurice N. Eisendrath

(Concluded from last week)

Is the whole of humanity, yea, even Jewry incensed over the cruelties and barbarisms of the Soviet? Then might it temper its wrath by remembering just what were the lessons these Russians were ever taught. What torturous and tormenting terrors dominated the life of that day! Writes Levin: "It so happened that on the Eve of the Day of Atonement there came to Swizlowitz an unusually large number of Gentile carts which drew up in the center of the market place. Nothing more was needed to give birth to the rumor that the peasants of the surrounding villages were assembling for a pogrom. No one dared to speak loudly or openly. There were only whispers, the report being passed swiftly from mouth to mouth, and all day long the Jews went about on tiptoe, hinting at things which they dared not say openly, as if they had seen, in the market place of the town, the Angel of Death with his thousand eyes and his drawn sword. Evening came, and the sun went down on a hot day, a ball of fire in a heaven of blood. Without arrangement or even consultation, it was agreed —instinctively—to leave no one at home during the hours of prayer. Not a child was left at play, not an infant was left in the cradle. And grandfathers, walking by the side of their sons, led their tiny grandchildren by their sides. They came silently from all streets, grandmothers and mothers, carrying sucklings in their arms. They did not hasten, for who can run from his destiny?"

Nor were these fears unfounded, as one horrible bloodletting after another ravaged and decimated the hosts of Israel. It was small wonder then that such sensitive spirits as Levin should have felt that "man was our enemy and even nature would not protect us. The four seasons of the year were in equal conspiracy against us" in this land whose hatred and violence knew no bound. Nor is the present suppression of religion in Russia a new phenomenon—except as it affects, for the first time, even the official church, "The government had but one object," write Levin, "the steady production of rabbis who would lead the Jewish masses in the right direction—that is, according to the wishes of the government. They were to be more officials than rabbis . . . and the Jews distrusted the government (for it) was following consistently one deep and unalterable plan: the destruction of everything that was Jewish." Splendid, therefore, is the insight afforded by this volume into the religious situation in pre-Soviet Russia, and most timely indeed it seems as granting us a perspective for a proper evaluation of present conditions in that vast land of limitless contradictions.

There is much hatred and passion, irony and venom in "Youth in Revolt," but there is likewise an abundance of keenest humor, and here and there one stumbles upon passages of surpassing tenderness. Particularly appealing is his handling of those romantic interludes which this sensitive spirit felt so deeply. Beautifully he writes of love: "There are two accounts in the Bible of the creation of man: One is the longer, the other the shorter, account. According to the first account, God created the male first, Adam, and when he saw that it was not good for Adam to be alone, he took pity on him, and out of one of his ribs, he created Eve.

DONATIONS RECEIVED

The Baron de Hirsch Book Club has received contributions to the Book Club's Sustaining Fund from Samuel W. Livingston, Louis Glazer, A. Ragitsky, Leo Feldman, S. B. Haltrecht, N. B. Cohen, K. Heillig, and Alderman Louis Rubenstein. Contributions may be mailed to A. J. Livinson, Baron de Hirsch Book Club, 2040 Bleury Street, Montreal.

Mr. and Mrs. Israel Livinson entertained in honour of the officers of the Baron de Hirsch Book Club. The vote of thanks to the host and hostess was offered by Louis Glazer and I. J. Charness. Present were Mr. and Mrs. S. B. Haltrecht, Mr. and Mrs. I. J. Charness, Misses Celia Boness, Ida Ratner, Celia Livinson, and Sarah Miller; and Louis Glazer, A. J. Livinson, H. H. Livinson, and Sol Weber.

You cannot make a man laugh because he ought to laugh. You may analyze a jest, or a flash of wit, and present it to a man, saying, "Here are the elements of mirth; and these being presented to you as I now present them, if you are a rational being you will accept the statement of them, and laugh." But nobody laughs so. People laugh first, and afterwards think why they laughed. The feeling of mirth is first excited, and afterwards the intellect analyzes that which produced the laughter. It converts into an idea that which was first an emotion or an experience.

Ground Broken For New Institution

Sunday morning, June 15, at the northwest corner of St. Joseph boulevard and Jeanne Mance street the "breaking ground" celebration of the new Hebrew Education Centre took place. 800 students of ten representative Hebrew schools, ranging from 6 to 18 years, ended their parade while Joseph Cohen, K.C., M.L.A., was dealing with the educational opportunities that should be afforded Jewish children. Rabbi Abramowitz mentioned Lyon Cohen, honorary president, the late Samuel Wener, Solomon Levinson, the Bronfman family, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Hart and Elijah Silverstone as friends of the institution.

Lyon Cohen was in the chair; Rabbi H. Cohen, chairman of the educational committee, pronounced an invocation; B. Levitt, president of the United Talmud Torahs, and H. Wolofsky, president of the building fund council, took an active part.

JEWISH PEOPLE'S LIBRARY INITIATED

Congratulating the officials of the Jewish People's Library on the progress made within the past 16 years, from a collection of 500 books to 6,000, and from congested quarters on St. Urbain street to the spacious and splendid location at 4099 Esplanade avenue, Joseph Mercier, K.C., spoke at the dedication proceedings Sunday afternoon, June 15.

Libraries as a force in communal welfare was the main theme of Mr. Mercier's address, with particular stress on the value of non-sectarian institutions such as the Jewish People's Library. He gave the library a globular map of the world.

Ald. Joseph Schubert, Ald. W. S. Weldon, of the city executive, Ald. Max Seigler, acting on behalf of Mayor Camillien Houde, H. M. Caiserman, and H. Wolofsky, spoke. J. Schaffran opened the doors of the library with a golden key. He was instrumental in supplying the institution with its sculpture and paintings. Michael Garber and I. Rabinovitch were joint chairmen.

SCALE FREE PIPE MADE BY STEEL CO. OF CANADA

The advantages of Stelco scale free pipe, as manufactured by the Steel Co. of Canada, Ltd., Montreal and Hamilton, are described in a booklet recently issued by the company. Three prime factors, it is explained, are the reasons for the excellence of that brand of pipe it is scale free, cold straightened and fitted with improved couplings.

The Stelco scale freeing process breaks down and removes mill scale from both inside and outside of the pipe. Each length passes through rollers while still at a working heat and is "kneaded" first one way, then the other, breaking away the extremely brittle scale (which cools faster than the pipe itself) leaving the pipe a true, smooth round of the size desired.

The cold straightening process is described as the latest and most efficient way of assuring true rounds with resulting tight joints. It is exclusive to the Steel Co. in Canada.

The improved Stelco couplings are made from specially prepared steel possessing extra strength and special tapping qualities. Up to 1½ in. in diameter they are solid and seamless and in diameters of 2 in. and larger they are heavy forged.

DAVID VARDI AND EVA YOALIT TO GIVE RECITAL

Vardi and Yoalit, dramatic interpreters on the Yiddish stage, will give a recital in Windsor Hall, Tuesday evening, June 24. They appeared here once before. A Russian by birth, David Vardi went to Palestine at an early age and gave dramatic recitals. During the war he visited Odessa. Then he went to Moscow and became a director of the Moscow Theatre Habimah. It was while with the Habimah that he was joined by his present partner, Eva Yoalit, and together they toured Europe and Palestine. Arriving on this Continent they joined the Little Theatre movement and a year later staged "The Dybbuk" in English at the Neighborhood Playhouse, New York. In 1926 they were engaged by Lee Shubert to produce the play in Chicago and also to tour with it.

Jewish Tribune Editor Likes Canadian Hospitality

Harold Debrest, Feature Editor of the Jewish Tirbune, of New York, says the following in his column called "Remark-Ables":

"Canadian Reciprocity is in reality nothing else excepting Stern hospitality, the sort that Rabbi Harry J. Stern, of Montreal, has brought along with him from Uniontown, Pa., where, we presume, he originally found it. (Maybe he carried it there in the first place, who knows?) We recently were accorded the tangible opportunity of a personal experience that led us to appreciate its rare quality and speculate upon its origin. Accompanied as usual by our habitual social secretary and most severe "censor" of Remark-Ables, we decided upon an "incognito" trip to Canada. There would have been no difficulty at all about the "incognito" part of it. We could have slipped in and slipped out again without anyone getting wise to our movements, except the prohibition inspector at the border; and we didn't worry about him. Kings have succeeded, also movie picture stars, whenever they want to escape admiring multitudes, so why shouldn't Feature Editors find it comparatively simple? We had succeeded famously in evading the swarming crowds until we decided to inform Rabbi Stern of our presence. That was the end of peace and tranquility, also loneliness and ennui. Thenceforth our stay in Canada's Queen City became one round of pleasure and sociability. The Temple Emanuel, the Montefiore Club, the synagogues and the representatives of Canadian Jewry were all dragged out for our inspection. We learned the secret of Rabbi Stern's popularity. It is his warm-hearted hospitality. As for his notable success, an additional element must be reckoned with (aside from his recognized scholarly attainments and organizing ability). It is the element of luck. Think of the chance that brings a Rabbi to a congregation which has an ex-Rabbi as its president and that ex-Rabbi as other than the well known leader of Canadian Jewry, Nathan Gordon, K.C. But that is not all. Maxwell Goldstein, K.C., the dean of the Jewish lawyers in that community, is Temple Emanuel's honorary president, and among the members, those whom we had the pleasure of meeting, are included such names as Davis, Ginsberg, Wechsler and Sommer — kenyirbo. We have no idea what plans we may or may not make in preparation for our next trip to Canada, except that as a preliminary step, we know they will include a wire to Rabbi Stern of our intention."

TRAVEL NOW A REAL PLEASURE

We are deterred from exploring the pleasures of foreign countries by fear of their inability to communicate with the inhabitants of those countries which they visit, to accustom themselves to the ways of life and travel generally. How many people have stood on the quayside at Liverpool or Plymouth, realizing that the checking system is unknown in England! How many have stood, bewildered by the babel of clamorous porters on the quays at Boulogne or Havre—lost in the strange sounds of a foreign tongue. It is true that for many years, the "conducted tour" has offered a solution to those who wish to avoid the many pitfalls of the inexperienced traveller. But these "conducted tours" have many disadvantages. Dealing with the very best and most reliable of "conducted tours," we find a time-table, and a bound itinerary, which, though probably is interesting to you, yet has not been designed for you personally. It is taking you to places you do not care to see, and it is equally certain to omit to visit some place that you have dreamed of all your life to see.

The outstanding advantage of the "conducted tour" is this,—it permits you to know in advance the cost of your trip. In fact, the whole cost is paid for in advance, thus obviating the necessity for carrying any large sums of money abroad, with the consequent possibility of loss or theft. This is avoided. The danger of being left short of money in the middle of your tour and so unable to complete it, is also overcome. However severe the shortage may be, you know that the tour will go on to the end and your return home is assured.

The chief advantage of the "conducted tour" is sufficient to outweigh its disadvantages is a matter on which there can be no doubt. It is a method of travel which combines the advantages of the "conducted tour," and yet leaves you free to choose your own route, see what you wish, in the time that you desire to spend, and is at the same time, flexible enough to permit changes in the midst of the tour.—This method is obviously one that will appeal to the majority of people, and it is this method that we suggest to our readers.

Go to one of the better Travel Agents who have made a specialty of this mode of travel, (consult our advertising columns for names) and give him a list of the places you wish to visit, and tell him the length of time at your disposal. If you are undecided as to where you wish to go, the Travel Agent will be prepared to offer suggestions for spending your time abroad in the most interesting and profitable manner. In any case, he will prepare an outline of an itinerary, detailed day by day, and submit it for your approval, with an estimate of the total cost.

This is only the beginning of the Travel Agent's service to you. In the meantime, while you are arriving at an agreement on the details of your tour, the Agent will have secured your steamer passage both to and from Europe, on the ship and line of your choice, and obtained your passport. This very frequently saves a great deal of time and trouble for the prospective traveller, as it is often necessary to call on several lines in order to secure the kind of accommodation desired. Then, a sufficient time before sailing, the steamer tickets are delivered to the traveller together with luggage tags and labels made out, ready to affix. On the day of sailing, the Travel Agent goes to the pier, and sees his client safely and comfortably installed on board ship.

During all this time, the Travel Agent has busied himself abroad on behalf of his client. Let us suppose it is you, the reader, who have availed yourself of his services. The Agent has secured not only your steamer tickets, but has provided also all the railroad, sleeper, or aeroplane tickets that you will require while in foreign parts, has reserved and paid for your hotel accommodation wherever you go; made the necessary arrangements for sight-seeing, either by motor coach or private car, and generally done even more than you could dream of, to assure your comfort in travel.

On your arrival, say in Southampton, the Travel Agent's English representative will come aboard the ship to welcome you, assist you through the ordeal of the Customs, and secure your places in the London train. No sooner has the train left the platform, than he wires ahead to the London office, advising them of the hour of your arrival there, and of the number of your carriage, so that on arrival in London you will be met again, without the need of searching for some person unknown, and escorted to your hotel, where you find your room ready and waiting for you. During your stay in London, the same personal service is at your disposal, and this is true, no matter where you go.

And so it goes on! You cross to Paris, and the Travel Agent's Paris representative is there to meet you at the Gare du Nord, and offers you the same unobtrusive service. It is available in Berlin or Birmingham, Milan or Manchester, Paris or Pozzuoli, it matters not where your tour takes you—there you are expected and welcomed by the representatives of the Travel Agent away back in Montreal.

There is naturally, a wide range in the cost of this method of travel. You can, if desired, travel first-class on the big trans-Atlantic liners such as the Firemen or the Mauretania, or you can make the crossing in Tourist Class on the smaller but very comfortable ships from our own Canadian ports. Then too you may stay at de luxe hotels, and tour in luxurious private cars with chauffeur and courier, or you may stay in the unpretentious hotels or "pensions" which abound throughout Europe and travel third class or by motor-coach.

We heard recently of one couple travelling in this way and whose East Bound Atlantic passage alone cost them Twenty-five Hundred dollars and on the other hand, we know of three ladies who enjoyed sixty days in England and on the Continent at a cost of less than $1000 per day each, all expenses paid. These two cases are cited simply to show the extreme adaptability of this mode of travel.

Bear in mind too, that though we have spoken largely of travel in England and on the Continent, the same applies to travel in any part of the world. The same service can be used on this continent, or extended to South America, to India, to Japan or China, to Egypt, or in fact, any place that a person might wish to visit.

The Street of Chains

By Lilian Lauferty

By Arrangement with Harper and Brothers.

Today Henriette had joined the younger children, and Carlie didn't want her to see the bubbles. Henriette hardly ever came to see Grampa, and Carlie thought he would like to be sitting up in his Morris chair ready for company when Henriette came into the room. He would like to have his little black silk cap on his head and his fringe of gray silk hair brushed down tidily behind his ears, and his ivory-headed cane in his hands and the crazy-quilt folded over his wide, empty-looking trouser legs before Henriette came and smiled at him with her close-set blazing eyes that were like big electric lights trying to shine into the back of your mind.

"I'll go in and see if Grampa is awake," Carlie said with an effort to have her voice sound as if this were the way they always did things.

Henriette's long twining brown fingers took hold of Carlie's wrist. "I'll go in with you, Charlotte. I can't bear to sit here any longer. I keep imagining some one I know may come by any minute and find me in this impossible place in this terrible neighborhood."

"I live here, Henriette," Tress told her sister. "You don't seem to think it is terrible for me to be here all the time."

"It isn't impossible for you. It isn't really alien to you," Henriette said, and her thin red lips curled down as her eyes brushed Tress aside. "Anyway you're only fifteen, a child."

"I hate living here. But it is better than licking Aunt Henny's boots."

"You prefer Grampa's. And it looks as if you aren't so stupid after all." Henriette began, but Don interrupted, and Carlie wondered why he was on Henriette's side and against her lovely, golden Tress.

"Grampa will be a happy old boy when he sees you, Henriette. It is darling of you to come to see him. Don't make it so seldom. Seems to me I haven't had a good talk with you since I was a little bit of a kid."

"You're not such a big kid now," Henriette said in the honey-gold voice of hers that always seemed to belong to Tress. "But you're a nice kid, Don. Perhaps it is lucky for me that you're so young since you're my first cousin."

"Don't be slimy," Tress said. "Don is as nice as they come, heaps nicer than your Georgie Pancoast. Still, you are engaged, Henriette, and you don't need practice."

Henriette's fingers tightened on Carlie's wrist. "What you need, Theresa, is a good spanking. No wonder you're glad to see me, Don. It must be a relief from my ill-bred young sister. Let's go in. I came to see grandfather, but I do hope you'll be able to sidetrack him if he starts on the old family history again. I'd come to see him more often if he didn't always babble about our wonderful ancestors and the way they got their start in Frankfort or Bremen or Hanover or whatever place he happens to think of at the moment."

Don grinned. "Honestly, Henriette, it is great stuff the way Grampa helps himself to the map of Germany and elects a different margrave or duke or prince the patron saint of the Gruenturms every time he tells the saga."

But David Moische never changes," Carlie cried, eagerly. "He is always the hawker of wares from the Street of Chains. And his son, Moses David, always founds the dynasty. The things that count don't change."

"Listen to the babe!" Henriette jeered. "What a lot of big words she knows. What a lot of big ideas she has. But I came to call on the ancient one. Let's go in.

So there was no holding Henriette back until Grampa was ready for company; and as Henriette shuddered at the mingled odors of onion and cabbage and sweet and sour fish and frying fat that were wrapped about the children on their way through the hall, Carlie felt more than ever that her oldest cousin was company, some one for whom Grampa would like to be at his best.

Grampa had the first floor front at the Rudnicks'. Uncle Freddy Frear paid a hundred dollars a month so Grampa could have that room and care and attention and the kind of food he liked without giving Aunt Henny any trouble. But Grampa [illegible] Uncle Freddy a "Goy," and [illegible] Henny spoke of her husband as [illegible] and Carlie used to wonder why [illegible] n't like Uncle Freddy [illegible] was doing things you [illegible] thought kind if anybody [illegible] them.

Grampa's room was [illegible] furniture and pictures [illegible] frames and rugs scatter[illegible] the worn gray carpet. [illegible] came into the room [illegible] that all the chairs had gl[illegible] them and that all crochet[illegible] the chair-backs had [illegible] against them. She always [illegible] across the dark section [illegible] bureau and dresser, and [illegible] and the six black horse[illegible] carved walnut frames, and [illegible] horse-hair sofa, and the [illegible] and medicine table and [illegible] bowed one another for s[illegible] ways ran to the jutting [illegible] where a long reading-l[illegible] barricade between the bl[illegible] hind and the sudden warm[illegible] yellow brocade chairs [illegible] friendly semicircle around Grampa's big Morris chair.

The bay-window of Grampa's room looked out on the [illegible] Carlie knew, but the back of the [illegible] to belong to the ghosts Grampa told about. He probably lived [illegible] the dark section when you were gone [illegible] and it came alive when he [illegible] you weren't afraid of it then unless you looked too hard into the [illegible] crowded with musty things [illegible] about as if they'd pull you in if you gave them half a chance. [illegible] Carlie felt, as if Grampa's room went on and on into the past he told [illegible] and so right into the Street of Chains. And whether or not you liked it, you had to go along. [illegible] But [illegible] you might not be able to get back.

Today it seemed that [illegible] was alive with ghosts that [illegible] and argued and shook their heads [illegible] changes approaching because Uncle Michael and Aunt Sara had gone to England to claim the Gruenturm heritage. All the Gruenturms for centuries were concerned in the golden flow of money that would soon be flowing under the Atlantic Ocean [illegible] cable and coming right into [illegible]

"A Goy will not be interested in our family history," Granpa said crisply. "Only in the money our Heritage brings."

Henriette tossed her head. "Dear grandfather, the Gentiles of whom you speak so sarcastically enter into our family history, don't they? Your grandchildren have no more reason to consider themselves Jews than Christians——"

A thin cackle of laughter from Granpa interrupted her. "To look at your pretty little sharp face is to know that you belong to the tribe of Judah, Henriette. Aie, aie! You have a modern version of my mother's name. You have also her nose. And you may even have part of her legacy when the time comes for your old Granpa to divide it. But the old are forgetful, Henriette. So if you had not come to visit me today, I might have forgotten that I have a fourth grandchild. You are wise to come. You will be wise to listen to the Gruenturm history and to impress your friend, Dr. Pancoast, with its importance."

"If you come into your fortune, Granpa, you will not be likely to forget that it is my parents who took the trip to London and won it for you," Henriette said suavely.

Granpa sat quite still for a moment or two. His corded hands were tight about the ivory head of his cane. His wrinkled eyelids were clamped down over his eyes. He reached for his blue glass box, took out a peppermint, passed the box to Tress and Carlie and Don, and then closed it with a sly smile at Henriette.

"Eat the pep'mints you have in your handkerchief," he said. "And then help yourself to more. Don't wait to be invited, Henriette. Help yourself."

NORANDA MINES

A visit to Noranda Mines finds this third largest metal producing enterprise in Canada not only maintaining its standing in the industry, but making steady and important strides toward greater achievements.

Very important additions are being made to plant and equipment and a steady increase is taking place in underground development. Directors and officials do not point toward the present construction as expansion, preferring to refer to this as certain work required to fortify the enterprise on the established basis of 2,000 tons daily.

INTERNATIONAL NICKEL

International Nickel Company of Canada will shortly offer its common shareholders new stock at $20. per share in the ratio of 6 new for 100 now held. This offering will net the company approximately $16,000,000 in additional funds.

LAKE SHORE MINES

Mill construction designed to place Lake Shore Mine in a position to produce gold at a greater rate than that prevailing at present at any other gold mine in Canada is now in its final stages. A survey of the plant and equipment reveals a capacity of at least 2,250 tons of ore per day will be established. The capacity of the equipment may reach 850,000 tons annually.

KIRKLAND LAKE GOLD

Kirkland Lake Gold is said to be opening a new level at 4,125 feet and is proceeding with a winze to 4,250, then the drive to the ore will be undertaken on the two levels simultaneously. The management is in hopes that the ore will prove more regular at these horizons than on the upper two levels.

SHERRITT-GORDON

An incline depth of 700 feet has now been reached at the main working shaft of the Sherritt-Gordon, put down just east of the Ore claim. Stations have been established at 200, 350, 500 and 650 feet. A crusher will be installed at 500 feet, and everything there is in readiness. A loading pocket will be established at 650 feet. The concentrator foundation is now practically completed.

HUDSON BAY MINING & SMELTING

At the special general meeting of shareholders of Hudson Bay Mining & Smelting Co., unanimous approval was accorded the by-law increasing the capital stock of the company from 2,500,000 shares to 3,000,000 shares and the action of the directors in authorizing the issue of $5,000,000 is 5 year 6% debentures.

In explaining the necessity for the new financing, President Frank L. Crocker stated that during the course of construction of the power and metallurgical plants it was found that by enlarging the size of foundation work increased production, to handle custom ore, could be made without duplicating sections of the work.

CALMONT OILS

Reports from Turner Valley are that Calmont No. 2 well is now back on full production after circulating hot oil. The No. 1 well made a new last week. The No. 4 is drilling at 4,160 feet, and No. 7 believed within 30 feet of the Dalhousie sands at 4,630 feet.

MAYLAND OILS

A. H. Mayland, president of Mayland Oils, states he expects the No. 1 well to make 125 to 150 barrels daily.

Lower Earnings for Vickers Reflects Wheat Situation

REFLECTING the stagnation in the wheat market by a falling off in earnings of the company's marine and aviation department resulted in a sharp reduction in operating profits of Canadian Vickers, Limited, according to the annual financial statement of Canadian Vickers, Limited, for the fiscal year ended February 28th, 1930. One redeeming feature, however, is the statement of the president to the effect that earnings for the early part of 1930 compare very favorably with those of the corresponding period last year.

Operating profit for the year amounted to $391,960 as compared with $457,311 in the preceding report. Deduction of bond interest at $165,000 left a balance before depreciation of $135,960 against a similar item last year of $301,284. Depreciation at $181,000 left a net deficit on the year of $45,040 against a net profit last year of $125,284. Payment of preferred dividend $89,250 discount on sale of stock subscribed and allotted $45,000; written off for research and development work $153,879 and reserves of $155,000 brought the total deficit on the year to $488,169 wiping out the profit and loss balance, and leaving a net deficit of $343,880 shown in the balance sheet.

Total assets for the period are slightly higher at $9,194,159 against $8,955,955 in 1928.

Current assets are up at $2,644,441 from $2,472,337, while current liabilities are also high at $1,479,255 from $1,163,120 leaving net working capital down at $1,165,186 from $1,309,217 in the preceding year.

statement made by Cecil Lamond, secretary of the company. The total redemption of bonds by the company for sinking fund purposes now amounts to $361,000, which is equivalent to $3.81 per share on the 100,000 outstanding shares of common stock, and gives this class of stock that additional equity in the holdings of the company. In addition to the redemption of bonds for sinking fund purposes the company paid out on June 2 approximately $100,000 in interest to its bondholders.

CANADIAN PACIFIC RAILWAY

Canadian Pacific Railway's efforts to reduce operating expenses were reflected in the road's earnings reports for March and April. Net earnings from railroad operations in March were off 32.4% from the average of the preceding five years, while April earnings showed a 26.9% decline. These results were substantially better than the results for January and February, when declines of 52.0% and 54.8%, respectively, were shown in comparison with the five year average.

CANADA CEMENT

It is understood that sales in all divisions of Canada Cement Company are relatively as high as those of the same period last year. Although it is rather early to forecast possible earnings for the current fiscal year, it is thought they will be up to expectations. At present the outlook for business in general is somewhat uncertain and until the trend is more definitely forward nothing of real worth will be forthcoming.

It will be recalled that in 1929 the company experienced the best year in its history with operating profits of $5,029,833 and after charges there remained a balance of $3,000,292 available for preferred dividends equal to $7.62 a share and 30 cents on the 100,000 common shares outstanding.

ASSOCIATED BREWERIES

Current sales of Associated Breweries are understood to be showing a decided betterment from those that prevailed for the first four months of the current year. This early falling off was largely attributed to general backward conditions existing throughout the west, where the company's business is located. The company is largely free from the difficulties of taxation with which carrier organizations of same type have to contend and even the fact that they handle a wide range of products helps to augment sales volume.

ABANA MINES

Reports brought back to Montreal by local interests who have just returned from a visit to the Abana Mines present an interesting picture of the progress achieved in development work on the property over the past year. According to these reports, the mine is now ready to enter the stage of production and only awaits completion of the mill to commence actual shipments.

OSHAWA

The marriage took place of Rose, third daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. Engel, Wednesday afternoon, June 11th, at 78 King Street West, to Harry, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. I. Marks, of Ottawa. The ceremony was performed by Reverend Weinreb, assisted by Cantor Bornstein, of Toronto, in the drawing room of the bride's home which was decorated with palms, spring ferns and display lilies. The bride was given in marriage by her father. She wore a silhouette gown of eggshell satin and a white tulle veil caught at the sides with orange blossoms. She carried a shower bouquet of Killarney roses and lilies of the valley. The bride's sister, Mrs. Pauline Freedman, was matron of honor. She wore a floor length green georgette dress with a matching hat to match and carried a bouquet of Columbia roses. Richard Freedman, a little man, Pauline Kagel was the flower girl and Phyllis Freedman the train bearer. The bridal party was in keeping with the color scheme of green. Mrs. Marks, mother of the groom, wore a flowered chiffon dress with a corsage of roses. The wedding party went to Mr. Engel's mill where dinner was served to 200 guests. An orchestra played for dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Marks left on a motor trip to Philadelphia, New York and Atlantic City, the bride traveling in a blue ensemble tweed suit with white hat and gray accessories.

"Sometimes when people censure me,
I tell them without rancor,
That for what it cost me to be free,
I might have had an anchor."

The Late Mrs. Lina Gutherz Straus, wife of Nathan Straus, who died May 4th., lived in the upper crust of American Jewry. During her life time in a general atmosphere of assimilation she saw numerous marriages between Jew and Gentile. All about her there were frequent examples of actual race-dilution as a result of intermarriage. She must have seen in many cases religious considerations and racial differences as the background for tragedy and failure in marriage. She must have concluded that in the majority of cases these considerations and differences do not become tempered by marital association; that usually it is hard for Jew and non-Jew married to each other to achieve a oneness necessary to congeniality and happiness. Mrs. Straus did not belong to that division of Jewry which mourns for dead the offspring who has married out of the faith or which at least views intermarriage with horror. But just the same she had such strong feeling against it as to prompt her to say in her will: "It is my wish that none of my children or grandchildren shall ever marry out of the faith, and I enjoin upon them always to be and remain good Jews."

The Neighborhood Workers' Association of Toronto must have come in for very strong criticism for F. N. Stapleford, the general secretary of the organization, to have spoken before the critics in explanation of modern principles of philanthropic work. He said in part: "If the social worker came empty-handed with nothing to offer in the way of material help, would that social worker then be valueless in his service to the poor? If so then he is no social worker. Our critics want us to do the simple thing, while we are trying to do the hard thing. It is the easiest thing in the world to give away money. It is not easy to fundamentally help a human being. How feeble and futile it would be for us to go to the families of the poor and find them bristling with all sorts of difficulties, difficulties of health, family disagreements, poorly functioning homes, mental disease and the many other problems which afflict humanity, leave them a small gift of money and go away. The Neighborhood Workers' Association believing that the solution of human difficulties requires intelligence and training has brought together a staff experienced in this work. In the past 25 years a great mass of information has been secured in regard to the mental life, the causal factors of human misconduct and the roots of human maladjustment. Would it be fair to our client not to utilize this to deal with them just as intelligently as we are capable? Not to use such knowledge and to go blindly on in the dark, blaming this man because he is lazy, when perhaps he is the victim of incipient tuberculosis, and dealing harshly with that one because he does such stupid things when in reality it we had only known, a child's brain only is the active centre of that adult body. That would be just as unpardonable as it would be for a doctor treating cases of diabetes and not taking the trouble to learn anything about the use of insulin. We believe that the poor cannot live by bread alone, but that they need friends to cling to, hopes and aspirations to keep their souls alive, and religion and love to give them solace and strength. That is why we refuse to deal with the physical needs only. We try to deal with the whole individual."

These principles evidently must be still so new that there is a generation youngish and spry which is ignorant of them, skeptical and looking backward perhaps with longing to the days when handkerchief collections and basket-dinner thanksgiving were the only manifestations of charity to the poor. Mr. Stapleford was right when he said that criticism against the Neighborhood Workers' Association for its large payroll for workers was an indictment not only of that organization but of the whole social work movement. The Jewish Federation, especially in Canada, is still looked upon with suspicion for the fact that it spends its money on all kinds of things other than actual almsgiving. Bread used to be charity. Now charity must include bread and sometimes even roses. Mr. Stapleford's attitude is the attitude of the worker trained to meet modern human needs and these are practically the same for Jew and Gentile. f.i.s.

From Our Contemporaries

The Pittsburgh Jewish Criterion says:

"Mrs. Irma Lindheim has been one of the inspirational leaders of the Palestine movement. At great sacrifice she has insisted in establishing an intimate contact with the situation in Palestine by spending considerable time there. But when she traversed the country she did not use the tourist routes, but she went "Palestine." Mrs. Lindheim has given us the highlights of her experiences in a readable volume which was issued some time ago. This week she has been in Pittsburgh urging an interest in Hadassah. Possessed of brilliant intellect and endowed with unusual eloquence, she not only encourages those who are wedded to the Zionist movement but she has interested large numbers who ordinarily would be indifferent. With such leaders the Zionists find hope and strength to carry on to a successful conclusion despite what are apparently insurmountable obstacles which confront them so frequently. Ordinarily we are indifferent to criticism. That is the price we pay for our adventure into journalism. And we cheerfully pay the price. But we regret that so many earnest-minded men and women interested in Zionism seem to insist on misinterpreting our attitude toward Palestine. And appreciating fully the sensitiveness of the situation we try to be as fair as we possibly can be in our conclusions. The attitude we have taken corresponds to that of probably the majority of the Jewish Agency; it surely is in agreement with the largest number of Jews living in this country who are interested in the development of Palestine. We are not opposed to the development of Palestine That we like to emphasize so there can be no misunderstanding. We are opposed as so many liberal Zionists are to the emphasis placed upon the political status of Zionism, and the effort being made by the extremists to make a bad matter worse by continuing to broadcast the political ambitions of the Jews in Palestine. It is so difficult to get the average man or woman who is enthusiastically interested in any undertaking to view it in a detached manner. With some enthusiasts the Jew like the King can do no wrong. The suggestion that perhaps some hot-headed Jewish youths may have been responsible for pouring oil on the flames during the riots is dismissed as unworthy of consideration. The suggestion that many Jews from Poland have made themselves obnoxious to the Arabs by their radical and bombastic statements is not given any consideration. The statement of Elsie McCormick that some Jews have walked down the streets of Jerusalem as if they owned the city and acted in a manner to arouse the resentment of the Arabs is laughed out of court by these enthusiasts. The same persons refuse to admit that the Arabs have lost anything by the Zionist movement; they can not see where the Arab has any reason for complaining that he is being disposed of his land when the Jews have bought it from him and paid him for it. They can not understand how any one can take the position that the Arabs should be given a voice in the affairs of the country in proportion to their numbers. They simply have a blind spot when it comes to all these things. When we bring these matters to public notice we do not do it in a spirit of antagonism but in the hope that they may be corrected. But to stubbornly insist that nothing the Jews have ever done in Palestine was wrong is simply ridiculous. We know that England has not done her full duty because of political considerations. But when we are dealing with practical situations we must keep those things in mind. After all is said the welfare and the stability of the British Empire is of far greater importance to Great Britain than giving

, of farmers and merchants and mechanics and prophets. The me of the recent development predicates a national program. the reaction of the Jews abroad to the Palestine venture was n essence. Some of the more recent converts pretended to be n Palestine merely as an outlet for the secretions of an over- nthropic gland. But in truth Palestine meant more to them than of charity. Somehow when the Warburgs and the Lee K. poke of Palestine there was a quiver in their voices and a look , which could not be caused by the most needy of hospitals or , or temple annexes. Palestine will have no value as an agricul- ment station, or as a refuge for a few poor Jews, or as a labor- s a preservatory. It will be worth while only as a national for a self-conscious Jewish people.

is, of course, the possibility, indeed, the probability, that some- itself will straighten things out. Sir John Simpson may submit a table report than did the Shaw commission, and the MacDonald will reverse its decisions. It is possible that the MacDonald t itself will be defeated, and a more friendly administration will s place. Again, it is possible that the Mandate Commission of of Nations may force a change of policy. There is any num- sibilities of a change of disposition in the external forces which the situation. Perhaps a little patience, a few prayers, and the providence which takes care of the worms in the ground and sh in the water will also adjust things for the Jews.

some reason, however, providence has not been in the habit of s with an excess of its beneficence. It behooves us therefore to more activistic attitude ourselves. Let us not sit passively, tweed- thumbs, waiting for things to happen. We are face to face with Let us make our own decisions. Let us exercise some control it. Let us create the instrumentalities for so doing.

ere must be a Jewish national homeland, or we do not want it. do not want a second Yemen, or a second Algeria, or a second Confronted with the MacDonald "Blight Paper", we have to do we are to do with Palestine. Shall we abandon it, again to the n inferior civilization to stand forth as a Cain's mark on the treacherous world? This may be the proper decision to arrive at. we continue fighting with the power of Jacob's voice, until our shall be heeded, and our rights restored?

ue at present is one of the most momentous in our history. a definite decision. We must create an instrumentality for finitively, and acting definitively.

, there must, of course, be convened a Zionist Congress. Let ds in Zionism have an opportunity to express their ideas on the subject. Out of their exchange of views, a certain amount of clarification may ensue. And one of the primary purposes of the Congress should be to rouse those circles of Jewry which are outside the periphery of Zionism to a sense of the critical urgency of the situation, and to evoke a reaction from them. There is the Extended Agency. Its extension is very limited. It suffers from distension. Nevertheless it should be called into play, and used for whatever it is worth. A conference of its constituency should be called, and its attitude proclaimed. This problem is one affecting all Jews. It should be brought home to as many Jews as possible.

In Canada, we think the occasion warrants the convoking of a Jewish Congress. Canada as a member of the British Empire has some influence in the councils of the Empire. It is therefore necessary for Canadian Jewry to present its case before the leaders of Canadian opinion with all possible cogency. Our Zionist organization is limited in membership and range of appeal. We are not now concerned with criticizing its leadership. For some of the people at its head, particularly, the president, we entertain a profound admiration. But the organization has in recent years had things too easy, and as a consequence has not been called upon to use its full strength in the scheme of Jewish affairs. It has been drifting, cheerfully, happily, on quiet waters, growing weak and flabby.

Well, it is not in a spirit of cavilling that we make the suggestion that Canadian Jewry call together a fully representative, comprehensive congress to deal with the great emergency. Perhaps it might be well to call together a special Zionist convention, first, to prepare the ground for a congress. We have had an all Jewish Congress in Canada once. It was undoubtedly the most representative and impressive Jewish conclave ever held in Canada. It met at a critical time, too, just before the San Remo Conference. Its resolution regarding Palestine undoubtedly had some weight in the disposition of the mandate. The present moment is just as important as the occasion of our first Congress. By setting in motion the preparations for a congress to be held in the early autumn, we will be placing the subject of the Palestine issue before the Jewish public. And the Congress itself will serve as an instrument for ascertaining and expressing the views of wide sections of the Canadian Jewish people.

Zionist conventions, Jewish congresses, and a world Zionist congress—these are the means we have for mobilizing the moral resources. These should be called together at once, so that we may have a roused, united Jewry to face the crisis.

Rabbi Elsendrath's Editorial

This, I would say, is the masculine account. Adam was created for his own sake, Eve to serve him. But in the second . . . there is only male and female, and both together are called Adam . . . "male and female he created them, and blessed them, and calld their name Adam." The second account is short, without an Eden, a Tree of Knowledge or a Serpent. But for that reason it is not egotistically masculine, and enters deeper into the secret of creation. It denies the existence of a separate Adam and a separate Eve. There is no priority, no degree of importance, the man does not occupy the first place, and the woman only that of the helpmeet. Man, the crown of creation, is one and indivisible, he only appears in double form. But that is an optical illusion, the result of our imperfect earthly sight and our imperfect earthly ideas. . . . I am convinced that if the biblical story had begun with the second, the truer and more truthful, account . . . we would have understood better the eternal problem of Adam and Eve, not in its vulgar, but in its highest, sense . . . we would have been more earnest in our love, and played less frivolously at love, and there would have been, in this world, more whole people and more harmonious ones."

Such is but one of the many passages dripping words of sweetness and profound wisdom. On all problems and movements the book touches: World Peace, nationalism, Biblical criticism, education—all are earnestly, interestingly, and sagaciously considered. It is more than a story of a Jew to be perused by Jews; it is the story of the Jew as this people has encountered all the thought currents and culture patterns of its day to be read by all who seek light and leading, on this and so many other tangled problems of our chaotic time.

FRATERNAL SOFTBALL

In the only game played last week, which took place on Friday night, the powerful Forester team battered out another big win this time over Bnai Brith, the count being 17 to 7. The winners had one big inning, when they put over 11 runs, while Monilla twirled steady ball all the way. All the winners got one or more hits, in the batting barrage, with Baylen getting four bingles. The Foresters get the heavy end, the coming week, as they met Bnai Brith in the early game on Tuesday night, the second being between the leading Judeans and the Knights of Pythias. Both should be tight affairs, with the issue in doubt. On the following Friday night, Foresters will meet the Pride of Israel team.

Anyone may make a mistake, but none save a fool will continue in it.

Sad Plight
of a youth who was in a hurry for hot water

"Seven bells! Just time for a bath and a shave!" . . . turns bathtub faucet . . . a wail of despair rings through the house: "YEOW! I STARTED THE FIRE AND NOW SOMEBODY USED ALL THE HOT WATER!" . . . dashes downstairs; finds fire out . . . races up again; covers stove with kettle, pans and pails of water . . . paces floor like a caged tiger . . .

Finally races to bathroom with water lukewarm . . . bathes, shaves, dresses . . . arrives at destination a half hour late with a lame apology; his character soured for days. Such incidents are tragic, deplorable . . . and unnecessary!

By all means, install an Instant Gas Water Heater and keep peace in the family. Built to save heat (entirely self-operating), a thrifty Autofiot will bring an unfailing supply of hot water flowing day or night at the turn of the tap. Stop in! We'll gladly demonstrate and explain fully.

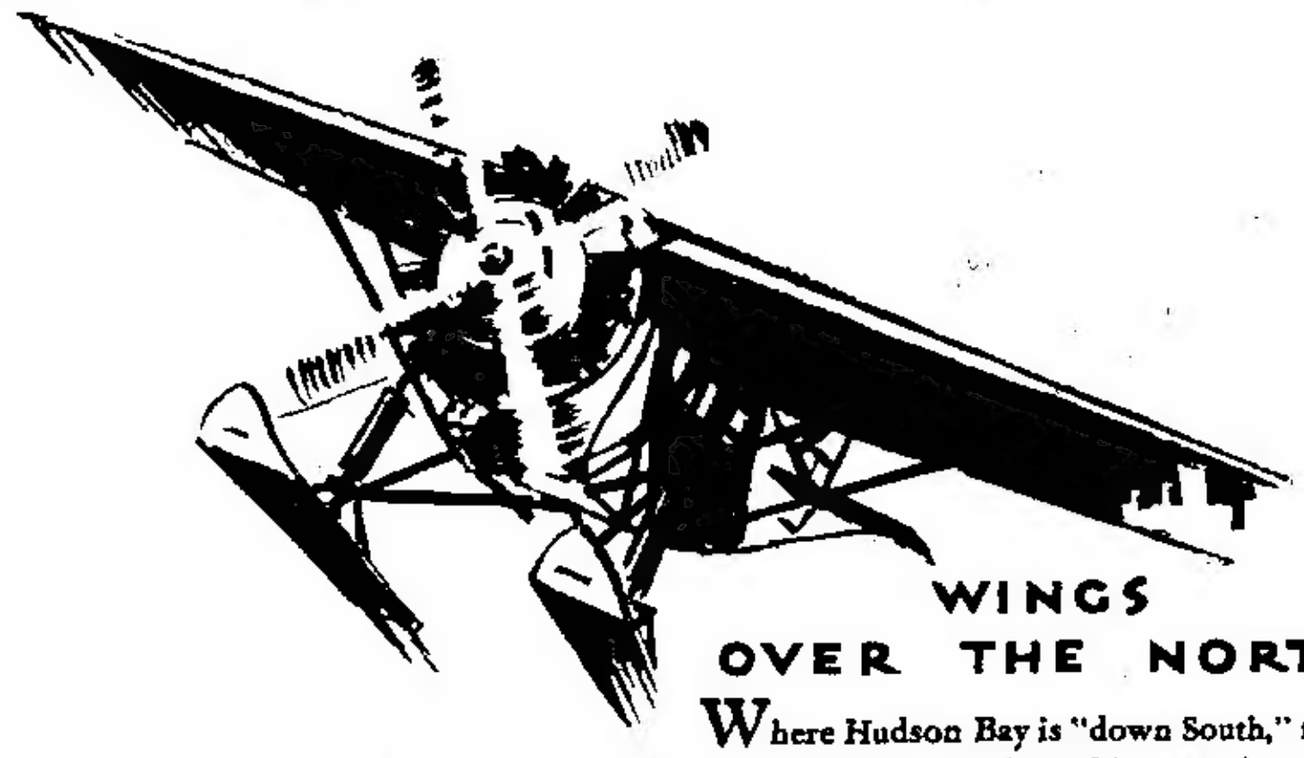
FIFTY YEARS OF CONSTANT ENTERPRISE



WINGS OVER THE NORTH

Where Hudson Bay is "down South," flying has become almost as casual as taking a taxi.

The wealth of the North is being staked from the air years before it could be reached afoot.

From Labrador to the Yukon and up beyond the Arctic Circle, supplies of gasoline and oil are spotted at strategic points. With these the northern flier spreads his wings.

These supplies come from the Imperial Oil Refineries. By ship up through Hudson Strait into the Bay, by rail beyond the Pas, by paddle wheeler down the Peace and MacKenzie Rivers they go to distributing points. In winter dog teams and sleds drag them further into the wilderness.

Ever since Imperial Oil began, fifty years ago, its work has been to meet new needs of transportation and industry. Because it has met them with enterprise and energy Imperial has become a great company—serving every corner of Canada and Newfoundland—reaching from the Arctic to Peru.

Fifty years of constant enterprise are in the products Imperial Oil sells today.

Marvelube is Imperial's finest motor oil.

Imperial Premier and Imperial Ethyl are its best gasolines.

Which means that nothing finer can be put in your car.
